
Ameria Develops Target Proposals On Reforms In Village Communities In Armenia

ArmInfo - 3/4/2009

Ameria Business Consulting & Law Company has developed target proposals on village communities in Armenia.

CJSC Ameria press-service told ArmInfo that the company pays special attention to the role of village communities in the social and economic development of Armenia as well as to effective and purposeful use of labor force. Thus, at the end of 2008 the company launched surveys in the given sphere after winning a tender announced by the State Service of Armenia for Employment to 'survey labor force in village communities'. The survey aims to reveal the problems in village communities i.e. employment, needs, as well as possibilities of launching SMEs, developing economy and creating jobs in the agricultural sector. The company surveyed 15 village communities in 8 regions of Armenia. To get full data on various social sections of the population, 12 communities with relatively low living standards and 3 communities with relative high living standards were surveyed.

The last three communities were Baghramyan (Armavir region), Ohanavan Aragatsotn region) and Mkhchyan (Ararat region). The company also polled employers, the heads of educational establishments and elders' councils.

Basing on the survey results, Ameria specialists conducted a versatile analysis and made relevant resolutions. Thus, the company developed target proposals on reforms in the legislative and social economic spheres to enhance economy and employment in village communities and to ensure effective and purposeful use of labor force.

The company made an instructive report at a special presentation at Armenia-Marriott Hotel with participation of officials from the UN, USAID, the ministries of economy, agriculture, regional administration, labor and social affairs, science and education, as well as the national security and statistical services, the National Center for Development of Professional Education and Teaching, and experts from Sweden and other organizations interested.
