Armenian-Georgian relations base of stability in S.Caucasus

DeFacto Agency, Armenia - 15/2/2008

---

Armenian-Georgian relations are a base of stability in the South Caucasus. This opinion was expressed by Armenian and Georgian FMs Vardan Oskanian and David Bakradze in the course of a bilateral meeting held within the frames of a meeting of FMs of the countries of Black Sea region and EU.

According to the information DE FACTO received at the RA MFA Press Office, Armenian and Georgian FMs had noted the differences in approaches to the settlement of conflicts in the South Caucasus and underscored they would continue the policy of taking into consideration the interests of each other in the issue. Considering urgent international issues the parties paid peculiar attention to the Kosovo issue in connection with the development of events around the declaration of the region's independence, which is expected to take place.

Vardan Oskanian and David Bakradze discussed the issues on the agenda of Armenian-Georgian relations. Again confirming the parties' interest in deepening friendly relations, the ministers noted determination of the two countries' leadership to contribute to mutually beneficial cooperation in all directions. RA FM also noted the importance of the two countries' involvement in the regional transport projects. In the course of the meeting Georgia's FM presented his Armenian colleague the perspectives of the Georgian-Russian relations' settlement.
