
They'd Better Say Who Will Be Killed With Those Weapons

By Igor Muradyan
lragir.am - 26/9/2013

When one gets in touch with Russian politicians, researchers and journalists, one is surprised at their confidence that Russia has contributed to and has even had a crucial role to the historical success of Armenians in protecting Karabakh. Armenian authors and all kinds of personalities have put this confidence in them who have done a career and earned their and their children's living through servility and favors to the Russians. Their names and activities are well known. They will stay in the Armenian history as a reflection of special mentality which is so widely spread in the Armenian environment. They refer to themselves as writers, journalists, professors, in brief the intelligentsia. They never miss a single chance to make money on national disasters. The government, rich Armenians based in Russia connived at them and backed them up. They certainly played their foul role in influencing the NKR government and Stepanakert people who seems to have forgotten about the crimes that Russia committed against the Armenians of Nagorno-Karabakh and thereby betrayed the memory of thousands of their close and unfamiliar compatriots killed or displaced from their homes. As if there were not for the cruel and cynical punitive campaigns in 1991 and 1992, destruction of dozens of villages in Shahumyan, Kanlar, Hadrut and Shushi, houses, historical monuments and memorials to the victims of World War II, Safonov and Polyanichko. Karabakh has not recovered from these crimes yet and will never get back the population and life it used to have. Forgetting about such crimes does not pass just like that because such activities of Armenian "patriots" enable the continuation of Russia's crimes against the Armenian people. Faced with regular supply of Russian arms to Azerbaijan, the NKR government did not dare express its attitude in a silenced or private mode.

Perhaps it is worthwhile to announce who would be killed with those weapons, how many men, women and kids could be killed. One can understand Yerevan's position, and one does not need to be surprised at anything, everything is clear and has been disclosed down to the limit. Meanwhile, they will use these guns to kill the people of Karabakh. Someone paid attention that it is already written in history textbooks or memoirs of different scum of Karabakh. One well-known newspaper remembered about these events and afterwards got Russia's assistance. Here is the "Armenian morality". Now too many writers or speakers have earned their living on money from Russia. They continue to instill in the young generation that Karabakh survived and exists thanks to Russia, begging with an outstretched hand. Armenia has an old tradition of patriotism on the church porch, people just live their life and are convinced that politics is just living their lives.

On the eve of 24 April 1915 hundreds of thousands of Armenians in Turkish Armenia also just lived a life and eventually ended up in the ravines of the Armenian highlands.

<http://www.lragir.am/index/eng/0/comments/view/30963>
